Professor Les Foulds
Department of Management Systems, University of Waikato

Abstract
Earlier this year, Les returned from a year-long sabbatical leave, half of which was spent at the university in the city of Molde, Norway. This informal chat is being offered in response to requests for Les to share his slides and experiences in that interesting and beautiful country. So, there will be plenty of snow, fjord, sports, and offshore oil rigs.

Les has visited Norway seven times in all, with four of the trips each being six-month stints at research institutions. One of the most memorable sojourns came from being invited to the Institute for Advanced Studies, housed in a lovely old building in Oslo, where international scholars work within small teams with Norwegian counterparts.
